  - (3) Use of German language was prohibited in the school. All spoke Russian.

Radio Operators Course:

- (1) Morse Code
- (2) Code Writing
- (3) Deciphering Messages
- (4) Map reading.
- (5) Identification of Arms, Uniforms, ranks, and all sorts of Military equipment.
- (6) Transportation channels of enemy troops, and war material to the front.

Intelligence Course:

- (1) Study of the personnel of the Army, Corps, or Division behind which the Agent was to operate.
- (2) Identification of uniforms, military units, arms, and other military equipment.
- (3) Map reading.
- (4) Study the history of Division, Regiment, etc., behind which agent would operate.
- (5) Study all sort of military and civilian passes.
- (6) Study all possible answers when challenged or questioned by the sentries or local Russian police.

Upon finishing the course the Agents had spent two months on maneuvers, and then reported to the Staff of the Army or the Front to be assigned problems behind the enemy front lines. When the espionage team reported to the Army staff they were first given an opportunity to familiarize with the front and the army that faced them. While they were there they listened to the interrogation of Russian P.W.s and deserters from the Red Army, or themselves interrogated those who knew certain things that pertained to their coming assignment behind the front lines. After having thus familiarized themselves with the details of the assignment they were dropped behind the enemy lines.
